07
Oct
2009

Introducing RemoteResponder.LinuxForce.Net

If you know the history of LinuxForce, you know that we've been doing remote systems administration using FOSS (Free and Open Source Software) since our founding in 1995. And we've called our remote systems administration service Remote Responder^{SM} for a long time too. But the website RemoteResponder.LinuxForce.Net is new.

The new site is part of our educational initiative to explain the issues involved in administering FOSS-based IT infrastructures to achieve the promise of greater reliability and ever-improving functionality while keeping costs low and meeting an organizations' ever-evolving business needs. Check out our new website RemoteResponder.LinuxForce.Net and let us know what you think.

Posted by CJ Fearnley in News, 0 comments